As a resident of the expanded city I feel it important to express my concerns that relate to our future. This is a red alert moment, a moment to act and to be held responsible for our collective actions. Plans should indeed be made, but we need to follow through on these plans. They need to be respected and delivered on, not undermined in the interests of business. The city could be a wonderful place if we acted now to safeguard it in the interests of beauty, aesthetics and the realisation that expansionist attitudes are very much a thing of the past and need to be revised now, not sometime in the future.

Tuairimí:

The least densely populated city in the world

Caibidil: Volume 1 - Written Statement» 6. Green and Blue Infrastructure, Open Space and

...

Ábhair: Active recreation and open space

As we are now living in the least densely populated city in the world, this is the moment to reflect on the advantages that this should bring. Imagine a city, a green city, with parks, trees, an abundance of open spaces, with gardens for the community to work and play in. Imagine a city that is a pleasure to wander about in, free of cars, where public transport is the norm not the exception. Imagine a city with no new infrastructure, with no new roads, no traffic jams, where we could all walk and talk and enjoy our lives. Imagine a city where decisions were based on aesthetics, not on business interests, which benefit the few not the community.

This is a red alert moment for the planet, we need to wake up from our collective slumber and realise that this city is the place that we call home. We have lost all sense of respect for the natural world. We need to develop hundreds of acres of forests, of green spaces and working beautiful gardens for future generations to enjoy. Let's wake up before it's too late and create a city, a garden city full of beautiful places where nature is the key element not secondary add on.

So I ask you to consider the fact that Cork City is the least densely populated city in the world. This should be embraced, welcomed, and all future plans should start to see the enormous advantages of a city that could be a model for other cities. Where parklands are the key development, where trees grow unhindered, where productive gardens are paramount, where bio-diversity is the driving force, where all decisions are based on environmental and aesthetic objectives, where the paradigm shift is so great that future generations will acknowledge the contribution you have made to saving this city and the world from destruction. It's a red alert moment. Act like it matters now, or there will be no future.

Príomh-thuairim:

Keep the population density low, avoid expansionist attitudes

Príomh-iarratais:

Decisions should be based on aesthetics not the business model

Main reasons:

In the interests of harmony, and the development of alternative attitudes towards outdated models of development.
